

Assistant Attorney General (Chief of Criminal Division)

The Republic of Palau, an independent island nation in the Western Pacific, is seeking applicants for an experienced prosecutor to head up the criminal division of the Office of the Attorney General. The individual must have substantial experience in criminal law and some experience in supervision.

Palau recently adopted a model penal code, consistent with laws applied in most states in the United States. See <https://palaulegal.org/palau-national-code/title-17-crimes/>. Likewise, the court system and Rules of Criminal Procedure and Evidence are similar. See <http://www.palausupremecourt.net>.

Annual salary of $56,000. Monthly housing allowance.

The job requires a two-year commitment and an interest in adapting to island life and a Pacific culture. Job begins as early as December 2016.

Please provide a cover letter, resume and a list of references. Must have an active bar license and at least four years of experience in prosecuting criminal cases.

Palau is an international destination for diving and has fresh fish every day. Are you ready for something different?

Send documents to agoffice@palaunet.com.